DETAILED ACTION

1. Please note the new examiner of record.
2. The finality of the previous office action is withdrawn and the amendment of 5/21/07 has been made of record.

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

3. Claim 5 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Seguchi in view of JP 63-179965 and Wicks (Kirk-Othmer Encyclopedia of Chemical Technology, Coatings, John Wiley & Sons, 2002, p. 90).

The discussions of Seguchi and JP 63-179965 in paragraph 5 of the office action mailed 1/19/07 and paragraph 13 of the office action mailed 4/24/06 are incorporated here by reference.

Seguchi and JP 63-179965 disclose the combination of a lubricating oil and a thermoplastic resin composition of claim 5, but do not disclose the surface energy (surface tension) of the lubricating oil. Wicks, in the first paragraph of section 6.1, teaches that for wetting to occur, the surface tension of the coating (lubricating oil) must be lower than the surface energy of the substrate (thermoplastic resin). In light of this teaching, it would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art to select a lubricating oil with a surface energy meeting the limitations of claim 5, in order to obtain good wetting of the surface with the lubricant.

4. Claim 6 is rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Yamamoto in view of Seguchi.

This rejection is adequately set forth in the office action mailed 1/19/07.

Response to Arguments

5. Applicant's arguments filed 5/21/07 have been fully considered but they are not persuasive.

Applicant's arguments with regard to the rejection of claim 5 are moot in light of the new grounds of rejection, which incorporate a teaching that motivates the selection of a resin and a lubricant meeting the surface energy requirement of claim 5.

In response to applicant's arguments regarding the rejection of claim 6, Yamamoto teaches that a thermoplastic resin may be incorporated into the fluororesin. It is the examiner's position that in the absence of evidence to the contrary, the product obtained by the method of Yamamoto when the proportions of fluororesin and thermoplastic resin taught by Seguchi are used, is the same as the product produced by the method of claim 6.
